

ALL 3 GERMAN SOME LINES IN ALLES' GRIP

French and British Fight Thru Night Like Demons.

Battlefield Weird in Glare of Illuminating Bombs.

VILLAGES BLOWN OFF MAP

Terrific Devastation Wrought by British Artillery.

Take 3,000 Teuton Prisoners; Corpses Piled in Heaps.

London, Sept. 16.—Fighting desperately to save themselves from retreat on a mile wide front, the Germans are throwing battalion after battalion into action against the storming British columns north of the Somme in an effort to check General Haig's advance.

The battle, begun yesterday morning, grew more furious toward night. By the glare of illuminating bombs men fought like demons with bayonets and grenades in the shell torn country between the roads leading down upon Bapaume.

When the last German dispatch was received from British headquarters, Haig's men were rolling steadily down the slopes leading to Bapaume, the German resistance was growing more stubborn as the British advanced out of the area were fighting their artillery. At that hour the villages of Courcellette, Martinpuich and Fiers were firmly in British hands, British troops had swept thru Foursauze Wood and were fighting on the eastern fringes of Bouleaux Wood and the fall of Comblies appeared imminent.

German Resistance Desperate. German prisoners were said to total 3,000. The German losses are said to have been frightful, especially in the Bouleaux Wood fighting, where the German resistance was most desperate. In the first advance into the center of the wood, General Haig's men found heaps of German bodies.

The British gained yesterday earlier in the week, completed the task of smashing completely the entire first three lines of German positions on practically the whole Somme front, under attack. Only at Thiepval, where marvellously worked have delayed the British advance, do the Germans still cling to their third line. Thiepval was outflanked by the British yesterday afternoon and its capture in the next advance by the British left wing appears certain.

News of the British successes, coupled with the allies' great gains in the Balkans and the resumption of the Italian drive against the Austrians, led the London public to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

New Armed Motor Cars a Terror. How large a part the new armored motor cars are playing in the present British advance is not yet known but military critics believe this new war vehicle has wrought havoc among the Germans. Dubbed the "Willies" by the British Tommies, the new cars present a terrifying appearance when racing into action. They have been the front had convinced General Haig of their worth.

The British advance yesterday morning followed a terrible deluge of shells poured in upon the German works. Courcellette village was literally blown off the map before the human flood began rolling down upon the benumbed Teutons.

The British advance yesterday morning followed a terrible deluge of shells poured in upon the German works. Courcellette village was literally blown off the map before the human flood began rolling down upon the benumbed Teutons.

Near Martinpuich, a ruined mill had been converted into a strongly fortified position from behind which the Teutons launched successive counter attacks.

Many Killed; Dupont Blow. Pompon Lake, N. J., Sept. 15.—Several persons were killed and a number injured at the E. I. Dupont de Nemours metallic cap works near here today, according to police reports. When lightning struck the main magazine building and caused an explosion.

BELLANS

Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

STOCK SHIPPERS

To Insure Yourself Best Results Consign to

CLAY, ROBINSON & CO.

Live Stock Commission Merchants, Stock Yards, Kan. City

We Also Have Our Own Offices at Chicago, St. Paul, St. Joseph, Mo., Omaha, Denver, Sioux City, Ia., St. Paul, E. Buffalo, N. Y., St. Louis, Port Worth and El Paso.

PERFECT AS A PIANO

PERFECT AS A PLAYER

Kimball Player

TOPEKA FACTORY BRANCH STORE

SALOON HOLDUPS FLEE AS DRUNKEN MAN PULLS FLASK

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Three armed men who entered the saloon of Joseph P. Schart here early today, fled when an intoxicated man who had been asleep at a table awakened and reached for his hip pocket. The latter drew forth a whisky bottle.

One of the would-be robbers fired one shot at the man with the bottle, as the three hastily made their way to an automobile outside.

MRS. HOWE DEAD

(Continued from page 1.)

days a Christian Science woman practitioner was with Mrs. Howe, often, but he understood to have visited her as a friend and not professionally.

Mrs. Howe was born in Virginia, and like her brother, was educated there. She has two sons, Wilson Howe, of Primas, a suburb of Swarthmore, Pa., connected with the Pennsylvania railroad, and Dr. George Howe, a professor at the University of North Carolina, and a daughter, Mrs. Perin Cothran, of Raleigh, N. C.

To Cancel St. Louis Speech. Asbury Park, N. J., Sept. 16.—President Wilson's trip to St. Louis, where he was scheduled to speak next Wednesday, will undoubtedly be canceled as a result of the death of Mrs. Anne Howe, the president's sister, at New London, Conn., today. The president was notified of his sister's death by a message reaching Shadow Lawn early this morning. Present plans are for the president and Mrs. Wilson to meet the body at some point between Long Branch and New London and then accompany the funeral party to Columbia, S. C.

To New London for Health. The president was informed a week ago of his sister's critical condition and on Monday came here, returning Wednesday to Shadow Lawn. Mrs. Howe had been too weak to recognize him. Mrs. Howe came from her Philadelphia home in the early summer with her niece, Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the president, stopping at a summer hotel in the suburbs. Her health had long been impaired. When her condition became a matter of grave concern Mrs. Howe was brought to a city hotel.

Baker to Make Sub Speech. Asbury Park, N. J., Sept. 16.—President Wilson today canceled his engagements to address the National Life Insurance Underwriters at St. Louis, Sept. 20, following receipt of news of the death of his sister, Mrs. Anne E. Howe, at New London, Conn., today.

The engagement for the president to speak at Baltimore on Sept. 24, still stands.

The president and Mrs. Wilson will probably meet the funeral party which will leave New London with the body of Mrs. Howe, at Trenton, N. J., and at Columbia, S. C., where Mrs. Howe will be buried beside the body of her husband.

KANSAS LOOKING

(Continued from page 1.)

reported deposits of $106,352,000, with loans and discounts of $83,397,000. For the first time in the history of the state bank deposits reached a billion dollars. It is probable that the September 12 showing will record deposits of from $255,000,000 to $260,000,000.

Immediately following the receipt of dispatches from Washington announcing a call for a report from national banks, a bill for a state bank report was issued by W. F. Benson, state bank commissioner. The calls of both the national controller of currency and the state bank commissioner are for September 12. Telegrams were today sent to all state and national bankers, with directions to immediately prepare their statements.

2 TO 1 ODDS ON HUGHES

Wall Street Bet on Election $10,000 to $5,000 Is Largest Yet.

New York, Sept. 16.—More activity in presidential betting is reported in Wall street today.

The largest bet was recorded today when a stock exchange firm placed a wager of $10,000 against $5,000 that Hughes will be elected.

VICE RING BEHIND HAMILTON?

Federal Officials Hint Sensation in "Quaker Girl" Case.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 15.—Mystery in the appearance of a large corps of lawyers defending William A. Hamilton, charged with violation of the Mann white slave act, has caused a probe of his backing by the district Attorney Wilson. The government suspects the Chicago vice ring is paying for Hamilton's defense, and hints a possible sensation. Hamilton is charged with bringing a 17-year-old Quaker girl into Kansas City from report for immoral purposes. The girl claims she was drugged.

Strikers Clash on Broadway.

The first strikers' clashes on Broadway were reported to the police today. Cars were held up and stoned and a call for reserves was necessary to disperse the crowds. Announcement of the sympathetic strike order was followed by much minor disorder in many parts of the city.

The police prepared to establish district camps thru the city. Camp equipment will be brought up from Staten Island. This equipment will include stoves and complete kitchen outfit for the strikers. The police believe strikes have threatened to call out waiters in restaurants serving the police along the water front and make the food situation acute for the officers.

Several of the unions affected delayed balloting until today or tomorrow but union leaders believed they were certain to join those already on sympathetic strike.

FAIRBANKS CHANGES DATE.

Nebraska Senator to Speak in Hutchinson Monday Night.

George Burkett, United States senator from Nebraska, Republican, will speak in Hutchinson Monday night to take the place of Charles W. Fairbanks, Republican nominee for vice president.

NON SUPPORT By BRINKERHOFF.

ISSUE NAT'L BANK CALL

Comptroller Calls for Statement, Close of Business, September 12.

Washington, Sept. 16.—The comptroller of the currency today issued a call for the condition of all national banks at the close of business on Tuesday, September 12.

Call for Illinois State Banks. Springfield, Ill., Sept. 16.—State Auditor Brady today issued a call for the condition of state banks at the commencement of business September 12.

Only 35 Recruits to Pennsylvania Guards in Two Months.

Pittsburg, Sept. 16.—Only thirty-five men have been accepted at the recruiting station of the Pennsylvania National Guard opened here two months ago in the hope of increasing the strength of the commands sent to the front.

Employment in the mills is given by the recruiting officers as the reason for failure of the experiment.

QUARTER MILLION AT STATE FAIR

(Continued from page one.)

fair concessionaire in the middle west, reported a thriving business during the Big Free Fair. Marshall and his wife operated the two big eating houses near the race courses and two lemonade stands. Quick service is their specialty. From this attitude of affairs, it is believed that the fair will be a success.

An amusing incident during the fair was a group of loyal Presbyterians searching in vain for a Presbyterian eating booth. A hot argument took place as to whether they should patronize a Methodist or a Christian church booth. Finally, they arbitrated and decided to eat at the Marshall's eating house, non-sectarian in its character.

Free flights by Capt. Phil Billard, the Topeka aviator, in his new military aeroplane, added interest to the fair. Captain Billard broke two records in a flight made early Friday afternoon. He flew for 100 miles in the air by remaining in the sky for an hour, and second he broke his altitude record by ascending 10,600 feet. From this altitude he could see the city of Lawrence and also suffer the discomfort of real winter weather.

The share of the Topeka papers in the success of the Big Free Fair was commented upon enthusiastically by I. D. Graham, former Topeka man who was assistant chief of the department of live stock at the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco. Mr. Graham is also a former director of the Topeka fair.

"What I like about the week of the 'Big Free State Fair,'" Graham said, "is the attention given it by the press. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value of preparatory publicity but comparatively few of them give proper value to the publicity without which there can be little hope for the future. The report of the doings of the fair is of more value to the future than the publicity itself. Most fair managers appreciate the value